Numbers, and Abbreviations

The numbers and abbreviations follow Daniel Fenning, The Universal Spelling-Book (London, 1798), with the Roman numerals as they are taught today, and abbreviations in use today in place of his old ones. Each is given once as a model: copy it on the lines below.

A Note on Capital Letters

The capital letters here are very ornate, but the shapes underneath are the correct ones. So you can copy them with all of the flourishes, that's the little curly parts, or you can just copy the main shape of the capital letter.
